

This is the Title of My Story

Author TeamU
Date 2023-03-20 10:29:00

Metadata

description This is the description I provided for my story. It's the short synopsis that tells people what my story is about. This story is just a demo to show you what your story will look like if you choose to request an HTML file download from us.

fanfiction 0

bg_color 41

chapters_0_name This is Chapter One of My Story chapters_0_date 20230320 chapters_0_content `This is the first paragraph of chapter one of my story. This line is in italics. This line is in bold. This line is just normal text. This is where my first paragraph ends. This is what it will look like when a new paragraph starts. The letters between brackets () are HTML code (p=paragraph, em=italics, strong=bold). This way, if you'd like to transfer your writing to another online platform, your text is already pre-coded for HTML formatting. "But, Underlined," we hear you say, "what if I'm not planning to upload my story to another website? What if I don't need the HTML code?" If you don't need the HTML code, you can use the find-replace feature to remove the code and change formatting where needed (ex: you can find every   and have your word processor replace them all with "enter" to create a new paragraph). Of course, if you already have your story backed up on your computer, you won't need this HTML document. You can simply reference the file you already have saved on your computer. This is the end of chapter one, and the end of this sample download.`

chapters 1

post_state new

cover